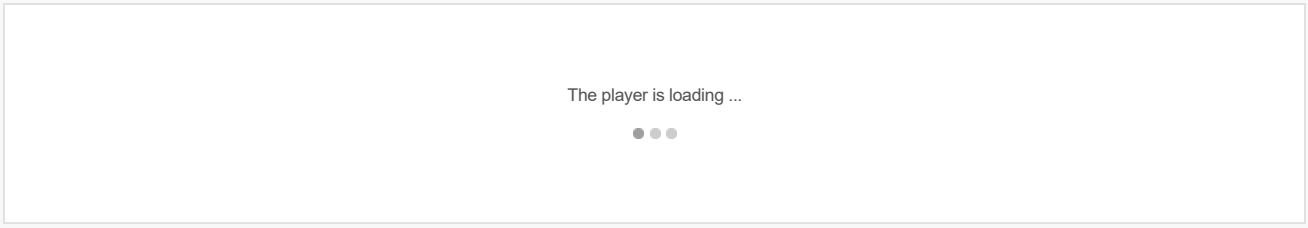
Episode 1: Adapting an Open Text

Published 1/28/2021 by Ashley Ribbel

Welcome everyone to "Teaching and Learning Stories from the Field," a new podcast from Seneca's Teaching & Learning Centre. In this podcast, we will hear stories from faculty about unique strategies and initiatives in their classes.

We are starting off the new podcast with an amazing success story of adapting an open text which has saved students upwards of $400,000, all while creating custom course materials, strengthening our commitment to accessible course resources, and ensuring day one access for all students in EAC594.



Listen to "Adapting an Open Text with Tom Bartsiokas and Tricia Hylton" on Spreaker

T&LC-Podcast-Episode1-OER_Transcript_v2.txt

Hosts of this episode: Jennifer Peters and Arushi Manners

Featured faculty members in this episode: Tom Bartsiokas and Tricia Hylton

Transcribed by Otter.ai; edited by Anonymous

Mentioned in this episode:

- Communication @ Work open text adapted by Seneca
- Fashion Business Communication adapted by Anna Cappucitti from Tom and Tricia's text

- Original Communication @ Work text from Jordan Smith at Algonquin College
- eCampus H5P Studio (H5P how-to guide from Jenn)
- Pressbooks (Pressbooks how-to guide from Jenn)

Related resources:

- Seneca's Guide to Open Educational Resources

tags : h5p, oer, oers, open-educational-resources, pocast, pressbooks, teaching-and-learning, teaching-and-learning-centre, teaching-and-learning-stories