

Seneca's Teaching and Learning Awards for Faculty

Published 5/28/2024 by Ashley Ribbel

Seneca is excited to honour our faculty who through their contributions and commitment have positively improved the quality of education and enriched the experiences of their students. These awards recognize and celebrate outstanding faculty who make a difference by engaging students, inspiring colleagues, caring for their students, and demonstrating innovative teaching practices.

Who is eligible to be nominated?

Nominees must be full-time, partial load, part-time, and sessional Seneca faculty members who taught during the 2024-2025 academic year.

How do I nominate a faculty member for an award?

Nominators can be any individual or group with direct knowledge of the nominee including students, colleagues, and administrators.

Faculty members cannot be nominated by their supervisors.

Self-nominations are not accepted.

Nominators must submit a nomination package that includes:

1. A 400-word description that shows how the faculty member meets the selection criteria for one specific award:

- Seneca Award for Teaching Excellence – peer-nominated

The selection committee is looking for excellence in the following areas: innovative or exemplary teaching practices; impacting student success; a commitment to caring for students; collaboration and sharing within the Seneca community; leadership.

- Seneca Award for Innovation in Teaching – peer-nominated

The selection committee is looking for excellence in the following areas:

innovative teaching methods and practices that enhance learning; creativity in course design or delivery; use of technology to improve student engagement and success; fostering an environment that encourages exploration and critical thinking.

Examples of innovation could include, but are not limited to, Flexible course design and delivery, extended reality (XR), or Generative AI.

- Seneca Transformative Educator – student-nominated

The selection committee is looking for excellence in the following areas: innovative or exemplary teaching practices; impacting student success; a commitment to caring for students.

2. Evidence to support the nomination – in addition to the 400-word description, describe a special project, unique learning environments, work beyond the classroom, special achievements, etc. Provide links where possible. (No attachments.)
3. One letter of support from someone who knows and supports the faculty member being nominated – from peers, students, professional associations in industry, other institutions, etc.

The letter of support cannot be written by the lead nominator.

How do I submit a nomination package?

Download the document(s) required and complete them in full:

✂ Employee Nomination Form used by a Seneca employee or a group of employees to nominate a faculty member for either the Seneca Award for Teaching Excellence or the Seneca Award for Innovation in Teaching

✂ Support Letter - accompanies the employee nomination form for either the Seneca Award for Teaching Excellence or the Seneca Award for Innovation in Teaching

Upload the completed forms to the nomination package submission form.

When is the deadline?

The nomination package is due on July 31, 2025.

Nomination packages will be evaluated by an awards committee in a blind review process using Seneca's Teaching and Learning Awards for Faculty Rubric \(PDF\).

Award recipients will be announced by Michelle Hutt, Vice-President, Academic, during the fall 2025 term.

What do recipients receive?

Recipients of the award receive the following:

- A feature in the Beyond the Classroom podcast from the Teaching & Learning Centre
- A framed piece of Seneca student artwork
