Four Seneca faculty members attended the first ever Adobe Faculty Development Institute that ran from June 15 to 19, 2020. It was held exclusively for faculty from Adobe Creative Campuses.

Participants built an Adobe teaching portfolio that collected the work they produced in the various workshops they attended. In total, 136 faculty from 35 Adobe Creative Campuses participated.

This issue of the Academic Newsletter contains reflections from

- Reflection from Siobhan Bell on the Adobe Faculty Development Institute (School of Nursing)
- Reflection from Hans Heim on the Adobe Faculty Development Institute (School of Information Technology Administration & Security)
- Reflection from Stefan Kanitz on the Adobe Faculty Development Institute (School of Marketing)

Since Seneca is the only Canadian Adobe Creative Campus, our faculty were the only Canadian representatives at this event.

As a reminder, all Seneca employees and students have access to the suite of products such as Acrobat Pro, Dreamweaver, Photoshop, Lightroom, Spark, and more.
